1988 COMPUTER ART CALENDAR

When Publishing Ink. decided to produce the first 100% computer-generated wall calendar, we knew we were boldly going where no byte had gone before. What our quintet didn't know was how fascinating a journey it would turn out to be.

The criterion for selecting art was fairly simple: all the featured works would have to be produced on a commercially available computer, and each selected piece would have to demonstrate superior artistic value. We also wanted to fully expose (as much as possible) the various hardware, software, illustration techniques and output devices that computer artists were using to produce their artwork.

Our production process, however, was incredibly complex: we had no idea the wide range of technology which was available, nor were we fully aware of the inherent complications in bringing the graphics you see here to their final form. Fortunately, the response to the calendars within the computer industry was overwhelmingly favorable, and we were able to keep up with the frenzied pace at which new innovations appeared.

Hopefully, the final results speak for themselves. We've included artwork which was created on a home computer in less than an hour, to state-of-the-art 3-dimensional graphics that are literally worth millions. Regardless, we feel that each is a masterpiece in its own right, and if it brings you the viewer a month of pleasure, or motivates you to try your own hand at computer art, then we've achieved our goal. We'd love to hear your comments.

As you read this, Publishing Ink. is busy fabricating next year's calendars, which promise to be even more impressive, more colorful, and of course, even more challenging. If there's one thing you can be sure about the computer industry, it's that the more things change, the more things change.

Warp speed, Mr. Scott. After all, tomorrow is another year.

“TAKING OFF”

Artist - Michael Swartzbeck
Hardware - Macintosh Plus
Software - MacPaint, MacDraw, ThunderScan, GraphicWorks
Illustration Technique - Hand drawn illustrations combined with ThunderScan images

People we couldn't have done without...

- Dan Moss and everyone at Computer Friends (1-800-547-3303) for colorization of Macintosh images and incredible turnaround time
- Paul Scott at Eureka! Typesetting (818-609-0702) for his “midnight oil” Macintosh/Linotronic® L-300 typesetting and humanitarian approach to life
- Eric Popejoy from Visual Information for always being available at the very last minute
- Standard Color for their flawless color separations
- The 1987 Boston Macworld Expo, which proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that dreams really can come true
- Miles McNamara for answering the question... “So tell us. What do you really think?”
- Our parents, husbands, wives, friends, and pets
- All those whom we’ve omitted, but certainly not forgotten

...we couldn't have done it without you.

| | TRIVIA: In a mere 10 departments, the U.S. government maintains nearly 3.5 billion records with 4,576 data systems. (And you thought Multi-User Helix was complicated...) | | MILESTONE: July 15, 1975. The first computer retail store opened in West Los Angeles. It was called (appropriately) The Computer Store, and now sells Macs from its Santa Monica, CA, location. | USER TIP: To save space on your disk, keep all program Help Files on a separate disk. When you call for Help in a program, it will simply ask you to insert the disk with the Help folder on it. | 1 Canada Day | 2 |
